

Across the Dark Water - Film Screening

Wednesday 5th August, 7.30pm

A filmed version of Ben Musgrave's exciting new play Across the Dark Water will receive its premiere first-cut screening at St Julian's Chapel, one of the venues chosen for its important historical role in the plot to overthrow Henry V.

About Across the Dark Water:
Maybe there's treason in us all...

1415. The armies of England muster in Southampton, preparing to launch Henry V's invasion of France. But Scrope of Masham has discovered a dark plot that threatens to unseat Henry and change the course of history. Scrope, loyal to his king, intends to reveal all, but as he uncovers more, at Itchen Ferry, he is pulled across the dark water. Pulled so far he may not come back alive.

Across the Dark Water has been specially commissioned to tell the story of the Southampton Plot.
